THE GREEN TANNING

AVO (Italian: acqua vegetativa olearia, which means olive oil vegetation water) is a waste product of the food industry, that means a byproduct of olive oil production.

AVO contains very interesting tannin components:

Phenols and polyphenolic compounds with high antimicrobial and phytotoxic effects, but also antioxidants and tannins. It is based on the use of a patented tanning agent (AVO), which was discovered in a study conducted by the University of Pisa/Italy. AVOTAN, the new green tanning agent, is extremely versatile and makes it possible to produce any type of upholstery leather with the best performance characteristics, even superior to traditional tanning processes in some respects, giving the leather a very special appearance in terms of substance and softness. Unlike all other conventional tanning processes, it has less impact on the environment.
